

THE 1967 HATTER

THE 1967 HATTER

Prologue:

The purpose of the HATTER is to tell the story of life at Stetson. It is the editor's job to select and describe, depict and illustrate the story. Yet it is really done by you. My job has merely been to assemble the material you have presented.

The story of Stetson this year is going to be told through pictures and copy.

We have tried to capture the faces of Stetson, but this face has as many attitudes, moods, expressions, and divergences as there are people in the student body.

The 1967 HATTER is a mirror—it is the way we see you, the way your friends see you, the way you really are. If glancing through these pages brings some small memory that is still alive in us, then we consider the purpose of the 1967 HATTER to have been accomplished.

Stetson was, is, and shall be as great as your fondest memory of her or as small as that part of her you wish to forget.

Stetson was as rewarding as the rest you needed after studying for your Christianity inventory or as annoying as the murderous cry of your Baby Ben at seven a.m.

Stetson was cold toast on Tuesday morning or roast beef at noon Sunday.

Stetson was the mail truck that delivered your mail from home, as well as the hand which pushed your "D" slip into your post office box.

*Over the past months, you had learned to associate many ideas with the term "Stetson".
Somewhere you had heard that it was a "good school academically".
Somewhere you heard it was a hat;
you knew it as a way of life.*

Sometimes you were able to see it as no more than a few blocks of concrete, segments of wood and a bit of iron.

Then you would think it a pity that such a representation of concrete, wood, and iron could mean so much to you.

*You knew days
when you walked taller than Hulley Tower;
You knew days
when you felt lower than the book you dropped as you rushed to your eight o'clock.
Stetson had its contradictions.*

*You knew Stetson as the familiar faces you passed daily on your way to class;
Stetson was the person on the other side of the door with whom you would inevitably collide as you rushed out of Elizabeth Hall on your way to the Commons.*

Stetson was the people, the acquaintances, the friends you would remember for a lifetime.

*"It will be more than a formal education" someone had told you. It was.
To you Stetson was an old friend when you returned from vacation.
It was identity, a sense of belonging,
a place to hang your hat.
You felt important.
Stetson was change, experimentation, and flux all wrapped up into a package which, oddly enough, resembled you.*

*There were new roles for you to try;
new ideas for you to weigh and measure.
You were optimistic and pessimistic at once.
You began to fall into the categories that ended with "ist".
You were the angry young woman or man.
You were the radical, the thinker, the poet.
Someone once told you that college would bring great change in you.
You weren't the same person who had left your hometown a year earlier.*

Stetson was a sigh, a laugh, a smile, a tear, a lump in your throat.

Stetson was sacrificing your study time to help a friend who needed you.

Stetson was being interested in what the chapel speaker was saying despite your efforts to be unattentive.

*It was your quiet moment as you listened to the rapturous sounds of the Chapel choir.
It was your moment of despair, your time of need, your hour of trial.
At the same time it was the energy and sincerity of a carefree you.*

Stetson was all-nighters, No-Doz, vitamin pills; yet it could be your Royal flush or ace of trump.

You mixed a fair portion of the good and the bad into your life; you were satisfied with the combination.

*The eyes that watched your every step as you walked across campus, were Stetson's.
Hers were the conformities,
the poor boys, the cords,
the bare ankles, the long hair.
Stetson was your tan from days at Daytona,
the laughter from the SUB movie, or cocktail dresses at a Homecoming dance.*

*Stetson was the boy or girl in your life.
It was the teasing, the torment, the pain,
The gentle hand extended, the questioning glance, the love of a lifetime.*

You knew and experienced the parting at eleven o'clock curfew ,the sharing, the day-dreams, and the hours of longing.

Stetson was every hope, every ideal, every emotion you had ever known.

In essence, you were Stetson.

You were its personification, its personality and its image.

You were the idea which inspired the building of its foundations

for you were the student for whom the school was constructed.

You were Stetson's first student to enroll and its last one to graduate many years in the future.

The Stetson you loved, feared, or respected was that portion of yourself which you loved, feared, or respected.

You were any name on any sidewalk in front of any dorm, and you would be Stetson forever.

This was the Stetson you knew as well as you knew yourself. It was all this and much more— so very much more.

Tampa

The Stetson University College of Law was the atmosphere of old Spain entwined with the vines of Old Florida. It was preparing a brief for the Freshman Moot Court or meeting at the swimming pool for the Inns of Court party. The Law School was coffee breaks at Miss Bean's, a four-hour exam, a student number, an unpaid debt from the Florida-Florida State game. It was a Gilbert, a Chet Smith, a Can, an "I Pass." You hoped you would be among the one-third of your class who would graduate. The Stetson Law School was three years of some of the most difficult work you had ever done, and your finale was the Bar Examination you would face upon graduation.

FINE ARTS

Art

Sometimes it was merely the process of beginning. It was as simple as trusting your hand to create what your mind had thought and your eyes had seen. Your hand would compose a miraculous new world from the palpable world of charcoals, canvases, pastels, palette knives, and turpentine. And when your creation was complete, you never regretted the scraping off or redoing which usually had prolonged that final moment. As you stepped back to look, you saw some familiar aspect you had come to recognize as your style. It encompassed the labor of your hands, the inspiration of your heart, the reflection of your mind, and you smiled to think that in some infinitesimal way you had captured one instant of time.

Drama

Perhaps it was an instinct or an irrepressible impulse which always compelled you to explore the vibrant, entralling sphere which you knew as the Theatre. For you found yourself returning again and again to participate in and explore its diverse phases. You welcomed the sound of a piece of scenery being shifted between acts or the breathless hush from backstage one second before the opening lines pierced the silence. You appreciated the musty smell of costumes, the feel of greasepaint, and the pounding heartbeat which seemed to chant "The Play's the Thing." It would begin on a poorly lit stage with an underlined script in one hand and a cigarette in the other, and the end would come only after you had heard the glorious applause, basked in the warm rays of floodlights, and watched the curtain glide sadly over the wooden floor and close for the final time.

Music

A sheet of music, a choir robe, a favorite composer, a concerto, a flute, a soprano . . . this was your world, a world filled with music. Whether performing in concert, listening to a Bach suite, or simply humming the jingle that had been with you all day, your life was imitative of that part of nature which was first endowed with the gift of music. You took the song a robin dedicates on the first morning of spring and the music made by the threatening wind as it thrashes through the trees an hour before the storm; you captured and elaborated both. With your cellos, harpsichords, altos, pianos, and one baton, you took one of the secrets of nature, sang it and played it for the world to hear . . .

Orientation

You knew it was going to happen . . . you had been waiting for three months—three long, calm, glorious months. As suddenly and with as much noise as the clash of one harsh-noted cymbal, you had begun the inevitable process of orientation into the world that is Stetson. There was a moment of hesitation (tinted, perhaps, with a hint of hysteria), a final deep breath, and you were in. This new world was one of coat-hangers, trunks, awkward silences. But the frenzy so engulfed you that somehow your packet of multicolored I.B.M. cards found you, and you waded, through the faces, past the arrows, down the halls, to the end of the lines, and eventually you gave "Charlie" the final schedule you hoped he would like. And then came the books, meetings, worn smiles. When you finally paused long enough to wonder how you would ever come to know the people behind those faces, your orientation process was complete. You were a member.

ACTINI

MALESCHI

I F C Rush

You found that this was part of it too. Perhaps, you participated solely for the purpose of meeting new people. That you did. Perhaps you participated so that you could call "brother" the man you would be calling "friend" many years in the future.

Panhellenic Rush

You remember thinking that whoever first termed this madness "rush" knew what they were talking about, for "rushed" you were. You began to associate water, tea, cigarette smoke, and aching feet with meeting new people, making new friends. For some of you rush meant long, tedious hours of work; for others rush meant seas of unknown faces wearing strained smiles. Somehow it was all worth it as the afternoon of pledging arrived. You embraced, ran, screamed, and sang the day away. You had a feeling that somehow you were a few friends closer to happiness.

Miss Hatter Contest

Contestant number one crossed the stage with the poise, grace, and elegance that you had learned to associate with beauty contestants. The other contestants followed her in their assigned order. From your seat in the shadows you watched and judged, selected and predicted. Your job was the easiest. But for the girls on stage, who were adorned with candlelight and flowers and were bathed in spotlights, the contest had a different air. Long before the momentous walk down the ramp, the contestants had waded through rehearsals, teas and interviews with the judges. When the final announcement echoed through the auditorium, your eyes strained to find the new Miss Hatter. You found the number nineteen worn on the dress of Miss Joanne Whisler.

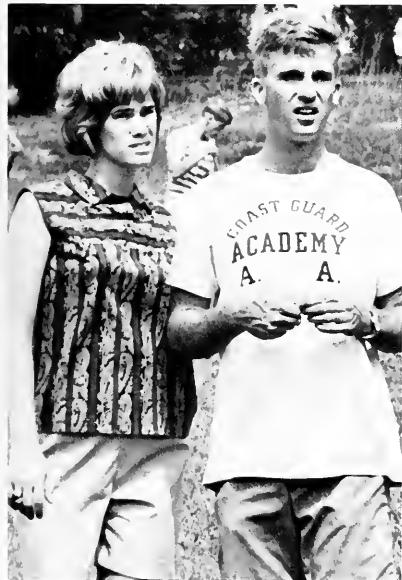

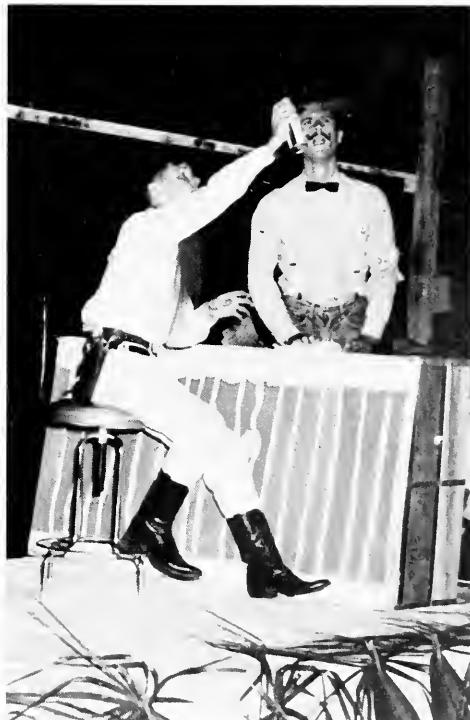

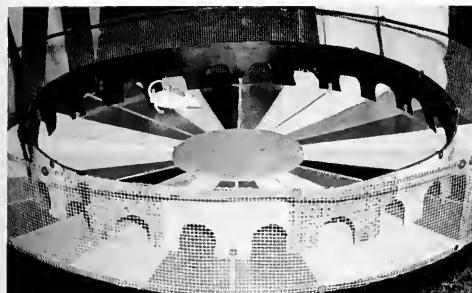

Green Feather

You sacrificed your Saturday morning sleep, your study time, or your moments of leisure to fulfill your share in a worthy cause. The day was filled with boards, hammers, and confusion followed by an afternoon wind which seemed to destroy many of your efforts. The night was filled with laughter, bright lights, and cotton candy. There was water splashing, a small child's smile, and blaring music. All this culminated into the sights and sounds of giving.

Homecoming

It all began sometime in October with a blur of strange faces and a registration tent. As Homecoming progressed, the campus pulsed with excitement. You danced, you watched, you smiled at the alumni whose pasts were being relived in your actions. You waited for the parade you thought would never come, and then saw the float you had so diligently constructed disassembled by the October rain. Homecoming was wet construction paper, anticipation and many fond memories. But as suddenly as your last dance on a Saturday night, Homecoming was over. Too soon you found yourself sitting in your Monday-morning class as if the weekend had never happened.

Homecoming Host & Hostess

Christmas

You had wished that by some miracle time had stopped, but the clocks continued to tick and the miracle was Christmas. It came to Stetson in the usual season, and although you had always watched your calendar with the greatest of interest, Christmas came when you least expected it. First it arrived in the form of a large tree beside Hulley Tower; in a day or two Christmas trees found a place in every dorm, every office, and every building on campus. You stood around the trees to carol, to burn a yule log, to share in the spirit of Christmas. You saw the Christmas trees as faint green blurs as you rushed to your finals. Christmas at Stetson went from hot weather to candlelight at a Snowball dance, from near panic about finals to tears at a party for underprivileged children. The time never passed so rapidly, yet so slowly: before you knew one moment's relaxation, you were on your way home to your kind of Christmas.

Rick Brannan & Wendy Robinette
Snow Ball Prince & Princess

Minimester

Minimester, as you knew it, was the shock of seeing a Chinese red Hat Rack for the first time after your Christmas vacation or it was the freezing January wind which penetrated your London Fog as you made your way to your eight-thirty. "Mini" (as she was affectionately known by the few friends she had) was the endless rows of heads you studied, contemplated, and memorized as you occupied your assigned seat in Elizabeth, Stover, or the Stetson Room. Or it was an independent study course, endless term papers, and long hours of research in the library. Minimester was a listening hour, a series of books, a frantic struggle to "keep up," a priceless class cut, and tedious hours of reading which all began one day too early in January and came to an end five weeks and a handful of pauses later.

Hatter Holiday

Hatter Holiday happened during the first few days of Spring when the weather was so perfect that your thoughts were anywhere but in the classroom with your math professor. So you took the break you felt you deserved, and for one glorious day you let yourself become totally involved in enjoying yourself. Enjoying yourself included alternating between dry egg volks, dirt and ice-cold water from the Springs. You went from fried chicken to the beauty contest, and the music you listened to was a band competing with cries from peacocks. As a finale for a memorable day, Stetson's agenda for Hatter Holiday included the serene beauty of a burning sunset over the deep blue waters of De Leon Springs.

Steve Wilkerson & Diane Paresi
Mr. & Miss Stetson

Graduation

As you looked in retrospect at the time you had spent at Stetson, you saw four years here as one particle of sand in the proverbial hourglass. The piece of white parchment you held in your hand indicated that you had accomplished the goals you had set for yourself when you entered the world that is Stetson. The goals contained in the parchment told half the story. You wondered what the compensation would be for leaving behind the friends who had meant so much, the buildings you had taken for granted, or the security of belonging to the friends and buildings. You found yourself looking around the campus as you never had before in a last desperate attempt to remember, to retain, to recapture. But the pendulum kept swinging and your life kept changing. And suddenly with as much noise as the click of a suitcase latch, you had begun the eternal steps—the eternal steps away.

WANTED:

Crew to explore a new world!

Vast unknown territory, rich potential. Some space travel. Ingenuity, adaptability essential. Challenging opportunity for skilled workers. Rapid advancement for adventurous high school and college graduates.

The new world? A small solar planet named Earth. Not visible to the unimaginative, but many can see it now. And—it's exciting!

The new world will be colonized by 90% of all the scientists known to history . . . and by technicians, specialists, teachers, writers, and many we can't name—because half the jobs there, ten years from now, do not even exist today!

How can you qualify for the expedition? Acquire skills needed for today's jobs—in college, technical, or special school. Then keep up with the knowledge explosion by continuing education—in seminars, adult education and TV courses, on-the-job or armed services training.

When you're set to take off, you'll go a long, long way. Bon voyage!

The Party's Over

It's all over now, except for the waiting; and by the time you read this that will be over too. It all started sometime last spring when the Publications Board gave me the O.K. to run, so Nancy, Elaine, Mia, Laura, and I built a rocket ship in Alden's Backyard.

Then came the time to pick a staff. "L'Heureux, if you can't be my managing editor why not layout editor—it won't take nearly as much time." We all settled down when we found Edwards. The staff began to grow and the editors were found—it turned out to be a very congenial group.

We soon found out that this esprit de corps was a weakness rather than a strength. There were days that passed when none of us did anything but play "Gully, Gully", "Plate", and have the occasional record player.

Franc was to do classes but not alone, I was very happy to find that Kris had given up cheer-leading to bring up her grades. We never were really sure of what happened to all of the pictures and weren't sure until the end that we wouldn't have a few white spaces.

Then came Miss HATTER, and all Nellye had to do was "woods it." The first trip almost brought an end to it, while merrily picking yellow flowers it seems she came upon a snake.

Anyway we had a pygmy and a fat spic. Then came a fuzzy historian. Janice really pulled the Greeks out; in some cases with no pictures.

Now when Sandy said she's be Organizations Editor I'm sure she didn't know that she'd be using the Instamatic. I'm still wondering how 268 and 269 got there, and we'll never know how 271 and 272 would look.

When we got to sports, I think Rick wished he could have at least had the Instamatic. A beautiful job of setting up!

Janie innocently dropped by the office last spring and has been there almost ever since. I told her Fine Arts would be no problem, but it's funny how pictures can seem to be missing.

As deadlines drew nearer, the job became more like work. The 3:30 to 5:30 office hours began to yawn and stretch until we were working most of the night. But it still wasn't really a chore. Besides the staff, there were always several people who dropped into the office and made things less hectic. People like Randi Bishop and Ken Taylor always had something complimentary to say and always listened to our problems. We were too far gone for help, but I really appreciated them livening things up. Suddenly we realized it was over! Now nothing but the waiting, yet this "big wait" wouldn't have been possible without Misenheimer. Now we didn't care if she got married as long as she sent copy from Greenville, S.C. She did—now here we are. In her words, "It was a lot of work."

It was; but you know something? It was worth it!

D.J.
